☞ The Editors of the present publication thought it would gratify public curiosity more completely if both the polls, on the late vacancy, were seen at one view: it has been accordingly adapted to that end; and, it is hoped, that the extraordinary trouble and expense on that account will justify the advanced price.

NOTE. The Editors wish to suggest, lest any wrong conclusion should be made, that it is not to be taken for granted, at once, that because a blank is found against any person's name in either of the polls, that he did not vote at that election; for it is to be considered whether such person did not change his abode in the interval between the two elections, and whether he had not several places of abode; in either of which cases he may perhaps be found voting as a voter at the other election, in a different department of the poll.
